An Explanation.

from Columbus to the Age-Herald. Whether in fact Beasley was allowed to choose between Columbus and Vernon we cannot say, but if not, the fact remains, it was a gross violation of the daw: "The party that arrested Beasly gave him choice between Columbus and Vernon, and he chose the latter. This clearly disposes of the lawlessness of the arresting party. As to the triviality of the offense, the charge was burglary, which is quite a serious offense in Alabama. When he was of the authorities of each state and will Waterbouse, an American architect, say come over and get them. The following telegram was sent out from St. Louis on the 23rd inst. and will be of interest to many at this place who through business and other causes narrowly missed taking advantage of the remarkably cheap (?) rates for a visit to Chicago:

"A Southern Express car at the union station is the present abiding place of an odd assortment of white and colored excursionists from Birmingham, Ala., and elsewhere, who are packed in the car like sardines in a box. The excursion originally numbered about 400 people, who paid $10 and $5 for tickets to Chicago and return and St. Louis and return. "The excursion" was engineered by a white man named Packett and the notorious "Doc" they started for Chicago. Those remaining here until they can get sufficient money to return home will make any locality pernicious to the health of Kennedy and Packett should they come across them. The excursionists were induced to leave home under the understanding that work would be furnished them in Chicago and St. Louis at large
